Hunters’ Lives - the final part

Regional Greenlandic songs II

Ukiorlaritmi pilluaritsi.
Happy New Year!

Each stamp issued by Greenland contains a small, unique story of our country, culture, nature and history. It is our aim that we take great pride in achieving because the stamps are part of our face to the rest of the world.

As has become our tradition, in 2015 our stamp issues will be despatched in three subscriptions during January, May and October.

Our first stamps in 2015 will be issued on 19th January. The first two designs depict Ivalo Abelsen’s artistic interpretation where we pay tribute to Greenland’s cultural importance. The stamps will be issued in whole sheets. The next two stamps, also released in whole sheets, show Camilla Nielsen’s breathtaking interpretation of regional Greenlandic songs.

This year’s additional value stamp will be issued on behalf of the Arctic Winter Games 2016 - Nuuk being the elected host city. The stamp will be issued in whole sheets, souvenir sheets and also in a souvenir folder. The January release ends with the last two stamps in Ina Rosing's colourful series showcasing Greenland’s mining history. The mining stamps will be issued in self-adhesive format only.

On 16th April Her Majesty the Queen will reach her 75th birthday. This anniversary will be commemorated with a postage stamp depicting a photo of her taken by court photographer Steen Brogaard. This stamp will be issued in whole sheets. The two EUROPA stamps, under the theme ‘Old toys’, has been created by Bolatta Silis-Hoegh and will be issued on 11th May in complete sheet format, souvenir sheets and also in a self-adhesive booklet. On the same day we shall release three more stamps in Martin Möck’s acclaimed series depicting civil aviation in Greenland. In the definitive series two new values will be issued, the 11th May shipment will be completed with the annual SEPAC stamp which in 2015 will highlight the theme of cultural events. Julie Edel Hardenberg is the artist who has created POST Greenland’s contribution to this series.

On 19th October we shall issue four stamps in a brand new series called ‘Greenland architecture’ designed by architect and artist Naja Rosing-Asvid. The stamps will be in whole sheet format and also in souvenir sheets. On the same day there will be another two stamps with a theme which we shall only divulge to our collectors next spring! True to tradition, we shall end the year with the Christmas stamps, on this occasion designed by Christian Fleischer Rex. These Christmas stamps will be issued in normal gummed sheets and also in self-adhesive stamp booklet format. On the same day, 19th October, we shall release our 2015 Year Pack in which all 24 stamps and 4 souvenir sheets will be included.

I hope our new 2015 stamp programme will be well received and used extensively in the letter post here in Greenland. May you enjoy the stamps in 2015!

On 19th January the second part of this series will be issued. The two stamps complete Ivalo Abelsen’s artistic interpretation highlighting the cultural importance of hunting within Greenland. The first two stamps in the series were issued on 20th October 2014.

Since the first immigrants arrived in Thule between 4,000-5,000 years ago, the Inuit in Greenland have been dependent on natural resources such as fish, birds, land and marine mammals. Hunting and fishing have always been a matter of survival in a country where the summer is short and the winter long and hard. It is characteristic of the catch in Greenland that it is sustainable and that the hunters use the whole animal when killed or captured. The meat is part of the household, while skins and bones are used in the production of handicrafts.

Inspiration

Ivalo Abelsen has a special interest in prehistoric objects of the Arctic regions and has the abilities to interpret and present these objects artistically.

About the Artist

Ivalo Abelsen was born in Nuuk in 1971 and grew up in Qaqortoq.

She studied for two years at the Aarhus School of Architecture and also attended art school in Nuuk. Since 2002 she has been awarded a teaching degree in art and design from the College of Forming in Nykøbing and an MA. in Culture & Social History.
The images depicted on the stamps are part of a series of river illustrations by Camilla Nielsen which have been given to guitar tutor John Hansen, in connection with the aim of promoting knowledge of and interest in Greenland minstrelsy.

I am very grateful for this task; for me, they are beautiful lyrics and melodies, which have given me great inspiration and deep feelings of wealth, joy and beauty.

I have created the chosen lyrics and melodies by ‘translating’ the colourful illustrations, symbols and brush strokes, along with other colours inspired by Greenland’s west coast, female, beautiful national dress plus many more powerful colour compositions. Colours, which to me are symbolic and testify to the magnificent wealth of ideas, nature and culture in which the songs and melodies showcase Greenland.

Camilla Nielsen studied art in France, Canada and Greenland. In her work as an artist, she is especially inspired by nature and people. She has had over 50 exhibitions over a 25-year period, produced illustrations, arranged courses and fair activities and designed stage sets for Greenland’s National Theatre.

Two notable, historical figures created the two songs: poet and composer Jonathan Petersen (1881-1961) wrote ‘Takoranneqaaq imaq - Nuup ikersua’ in English ‘Great is the sea in Nuuk inlets’, while pastor, writer and composer Otto Rosing (1896-1965) wrote ‘Tarrilivissup seqerna qulaani’, in English ‘From the top view last glimpse of the sun’s rays’.

The former mentioned song, Camilla has so artistically interpreted on the stamp G553 with a value of DKK 49.00, while she has illustrated the latter song on the stamp G552 that has a value of DKK 0.50.

Takoranneqaaq imaq - Nuup ikersua
(Great is the sea in Nuuk inlets)
By Jonathan Petersen
Quiet calm seas in Nuup ikersua
Seen from the mountains on your pages
Shiny, beautiful as you are
I sail above your healthy
In the mouth long as you are, wide as you are
Nuup kangerlua is also your name
Surrounded by, riding over our ship
Whales in your sea
Seals in your sea
Fish in your sea
Your precious sea, we rejoice

Tarrilivissup seqerna qulaani (From the top view last glimpse of the sun’s rays)
By Otto Rosing
With red clouds of sunset
Ilulissat - where icebergs are born
To your beautiful scenery in the north
A poem, a pleasure I got from the sight I met -
The large icebergs, like silver in the ocean blue,
Far landscapes so beautiful from forever
On the beaches here, where the great hunter ancestors landed gangster, life birth -
Ilulissat – Ice giants roar.

Here in the city, I remember now the ‘Siiuni’ church
How I thank God on high
The beautiful sun goes down, summer is over,
In the darkness of winter with Christmas peace
Be of good cheer, my kinsman, as we know the sun will rise again
Despite my strength now, we will soon be separated
Ilulissat summer, I will never forget
Additional Value stamp to support the 2016 Arctic Winter Games

By Pertti Frandsen

The Arctic Winter Games (AWG) are to be held from 6th to 12th March 2016.

For the second time Nuuk will be the host city for the Arctic Winter Games, where Inuit and Sami compete for a week. The sports disciplines will be both traditional Inuit sports and skiing as well as more modern sports such as ice hockey, volleyball and indoor football.

POST Greenland will provide inter alia support for the event by releasing an additional value stamp for the benefit of the Arctic Winter Games.

The first Arctic Winter Games were held in 1970. Greenland participated for the first time in 1990.

AWG is much more than a sporting event. It is a cultural hub where young people get the opportunity to see others from their own hometown, the opportunity to test their athletic abilities, be together with other young people across the country, with other cultures and languages. In addition to the sporting activities, AWG also provides a cultural exchange with other young people from the other participating countries.

Greenland has created a good reputation for itself through its participation in recent Games. These Games have showcased Greenland’s cultural activities throughout the ages and has given pride and increased self-esteem to the participants and, not least, shown to the outside world that Greenland’s youth function at a high cultural level. Membership of the Arctic Winter Games makes Greenland participate equally with the other Arctic countries. Every two years many young people participate in an event which steers them along a positive track and gives them unforgettable experiences to which they hold on to throughout their lives.

gravitational split-up, exploiting the high gold density which is undertaken by a crushing and subsequent separation from the surrounding quartz, metallic gold and quartz. This means that the gold was separated from the ore it only has to be moulded into bars before it can be sold to customers.

Gold production from Nalunaq has resulted in the recovery of nearly 11 tonnes of pure gold during the mine’s 10 year life. Almost 700,000 tonnes of ore was mined to achieve this result. Mining is by underground methods: the 3,000 metres of galleries, spread over four levels between 300-450 metres above sea level. In 2013 there was a change of ownership and ownership and shortly after, this ended the activity of Greenland’s only gold mine. It was a “small mine with a rich ore” with a yearly employment of 25 workers.

From the beginning gold from Nalunaq has been very popular in jewellery and it was also used as part of a series of Danish commemorative coins with a denomination of DKK 1000.00, decorated by the polar bear trademark, an official mark indicating pure Greenland gold.

Olivine Mine, Seqi, Fiskefjord

The Seqi olivine rock deposit was discovered as a result of the Kryolitselskabet Øresund’s exploration, which took place between 1965–1971. The name ‘Seqi’ was formed from an abbreviation of the name Seqinersuusuaq.

A bulk sample of 12.5 tonnes of the olivine rock was collected as part of the survey and its quality and potential for commercial exploitation was assessed as being most positive. The intended use of olivine was as a slag in iron smelting in Sweden. Different companies have investigated the rock olivine, which ended in 2004 when the Swedish Minelco Group AB took over the exploration. From 2005 the Seqi olivine could officially begin as a so-called ‘open pit’ mine.

The olivine deposit’s size would yield at least 100 million tonnes of ore, which meant that there was sufficient resource to last for at least 25 years of production at the site. During the first year the necessary equipment were installed for the handling of rock olivine and a future annual production of two million tonnes was estimated. After mining, the ore was crushed into gravel, sorted and cleaned and then shipped to customers in Europe in large ore carriers. The ships could carry up to 50,000 tons per load.

The mine port had a transatlantic pier constructed, measuring 340 metres by 16 metres in depth, and accommodation buildings for the 25 people who were employed at the mine. In 2008, the company had to accept rising freight charges and the subsequent low profitability of the mining operation resulted in production being abandoned in October 2009.

Since 2003 POST Greenland has included self-adhesive stamps in its programme. That include the recent series on the Greenland mining history, and is the case with stamps G555 and G556, issued on 19th January 2015. The two stamp designs have been created by Ina Rosing.

By Karsten Secher, seniorgeolog (GEUS)

The two stamps, which will complete the series on the history of mining in Greenland, include designs from two mineral resource extremes: the classical mineral resource gold, and the lesser known commodity, the industrial mineral olivine.

Gold Mine, Nalunaq, Nanortalik

The gold mine ‘Nalunaq’ has existed since 26th August 2004. Nalunaq – meaning ‘a place that is difficult to find’ - was the name of Greenland’s first gold mine. Since the 1970’s significant gold deposits have been found and recorded in many parts of Greenland without this having led to actual mining taking place. The find of Nalunaq deposit is the result of solid geological work that encompassed 10 years of studies prior to commencing mining. A milestone was definitely reached in Greenland 2004 by the opening of a new mine. After 14 years of stagnation – Greenland could, once again, be called a mining country.

The mining company Nalunaq Gold Mine A/S was given permission to exploit the gold deposit at Nalunaq. The mined gold ore was delivered to a processing plant abroad - first in Spain and later on in Canada. The Nalunaq port was chosen as there is deep water close to shore, enabling large ore bulk carriers to load up directly from the wharf storage area. These are quite large cargo ships, which can carry about 40,000–50,000 tonnes of ore.

The minerals found in the gold ore are dominated by metallic gold and quartz. This means that the gold was only to be separated from the surrounding quartz, which is undertaken by a crushing and subsequent gravitational split-up, exploiting the high gold density (19.3 g/cm³). As the bedrock has a density of about 3 g/cm³, this separation is easy undertaken and has a high yield. Therefore, once the gold has been separated from the ore it only has to be moulded into bars before it can be sold to customers.

Gold production from Nalunaq has resulted in the recovery of nearly 11 tonnes of pure gold during the mine’s 10 year life. Almost 700,000 tonnes of ore was mined to achieve this result. Mining is by underground methods: the 3,000 metres of galleries, spread over four levels between 300-450 metres above sea level. In collaboration with our colleagues from Post Denmark, we are giving our collectors and also the readers of the ‘Greenland Collector’ the opportunity to join in on our travel booking for our trip to China.

From 25th - 28th September 2015 China Post will be holding a huge stamp collecting exhibition in Beijing entitled - ‘China International Collection Expo’ - and we wish to give our faithful customers an exciting offer to participate in this event. Over the last 5 years, Post Denmark has worked closely with China Post in connection with stamps. Members of Post Denmark’s philatelic team have trained Chinese engravers and have been consultants on purchases of a new printing machine, plus they have had lots of sales cooperation with philatelic colleagues at the China National Philatelic Corporation. This collaboration has created many good, high-level contacts at China Post. Are you interested in stamps or just curious about China?

Why not come with us to Beijing and see what a stamp exhibition looks like when there are over 100,000 visitors attending the exhibition - and visit behind the scenes at China Post. Post Denmark, in cooperation with Sinex travel, has created an attractive package which also allows you to take your spouse, partner or a friend with you - and, while you enjoy the world of stamps, they can participate in an special ‘partner itinerary’. The part of the itinerary regarding stamps will be handled by Design Director, Martin Pingel, and Sales and Marketing Manager, Bo Hoifeldt, they are both representing Post Denmark Stamps and will accompany you on a tour around the Chinese stamp world.

ITINERARY

25th and 26th September: Attend the stamp exhibition- commencing with the official opening ceremony and then there will be special tours, plus there will be time to meet with Chinese collectors and also to explore the exhibition on your own.

27th September: Visit the Chinese stamp printers ‘Beijing Stamp Printing House’ where you will meet the engravers and technicians and be given a guided tour. You will be able to look at products, have a tour of their stamp museum and also have a look at the current stamps being produced.

28th September: Visit the Postal Museum. There will be a guided tour where you will see all the Chinese stamps (including whole sheets of the rare ‘Monkey stamps’), postal history plus have the opportunity to obtain answers to intricate postal matters; then visit China Post’s philatelic China National Philatelic Corporation where you may listen to a lecture about Chinese stamps and the development of their philatelic products.

Meet with the designers who will be showcasing their special stamp products. And from then onwards the ‘great china tour’ begins for everyone in the group. The tour, and how to enrol, you can read more about in the coming pages. We hope you think it sounds exciting and that we shall meet you in Beijing next Autumn!

Greenlandic stamps at NORDIA 2014

By Pertti Frandsen

Stamp collectors from all over Scandinavia flocked to Lillestrøm in Norway to spend three days engrossed in stamp designs.

Norway is the second largest market for Greenlandic stamps and this fact was clearly demonstrated during the annual Nordic stamp exhibition NORDIA, which took place in Lillestrøm just north of Oslo.

NORDIA 2014 was organised by the Norwegian Filatelist forbund in cooperation with Posten Norway. POST Greenland participated in the joint Nordic stand with the Faroe Islands, Iceland and Åland. The latest Greenlandic stamps were eagerly sought after along with the annual Year Pack, and the book entitled ‘Twelve Greenland Expeditions 1818 -1978’, which was issued by POST Greenland earlier this month.

“It is important to us that we meet our customers in our second largest market and hear their views about our stamps”, said Philatelic Manager Allan Pertti Frandsen.

“It’s only every six years that the exhibition NORDIA is held in Norway, so for us it is important to take the opportunity to serve our Norwegian customers in person and maybe obtain some new collectors in Norway too. Animal stamp images and historical designs are in high demand amongst the Norwegian collectors, and these themes are widely covered in both this year’s and next year’s stamp programmes.” said a satisfied Allan Pertti Frandsen.

Great success at the Stamp, Letter & Postcard Exhibition 2014 Frederiksberg

By Hjørdis Viberg

Denmark is the main market for Greenlandic stamps. Therefore, POST Greenland once again participated in the ‘Stamp, Letter and Postcard Fair’ in Copenhagen.

Hjørdis Viberg, head of Philately at the TELE-POST Centre in Tasiilaq, participated at the fair.

“It was a great experience to participate in the great fair and it was a great honour to be able to help to open the show,” says Hjørdis Viberg, who spent two really busy days on the stand in Frederiksberg. She continued: “There was a strong focus on our stamps and collectors queued up at our booth from start to finish to buy the new issues from 2014”.

The new book ‘Twelve Greenland Expeditions 1818 -1978’, which had just arrived from the printers, was also sold at the stand. It tells of three known and nine lesser known expeditions to Greenland. These expeditions have been highlighted by a series of stamps issued by POST Greenland between 2003 – 2014. The last two stamps in this series shows Jørgen Brønlund, Mylius-Erichsen and Hoeg Hagen from the famous Danish Expedition 1906-1908.

Maxi Cards and postcards are discontinued as products

Maxi Cards and postcards are deleted from our range per 31st December 2014. The reason is that we have too few subscribers for these collectibles.
Maxi Cards from the issue 20th October 2014 will be on sale until 20th April 2015, i.e. 6 months from the date of issue. Subsequently, Maxi Cards will no longer be for sale at POST Greenland.
All postcards will be for sale as long as stocks last. Regardless of when they were issued.
Fair cards will no longer be for sale after 31st December 2014.
